Evidence Based Guidelines for Midwifery-Led Care in Labour

For every clinical situation a midwife experiences, her decision making will be influenced by the context and the choices and needs of the woman for whom she is providing midwifery care. Therefore these guidelines are intended as guidelines only rather than prescribed inflexible protocols which may not allow for the individual woman's context. In every given situation there must be opportunity for midwives to use sound judgement, to act with sound rationale and acknowledge the context when ...
